Kharazmi University at a Glance

The first teacher training institution for primary schools in Iran was established as Darol-Mo'alleminAali Markazi (Central House of Teachers) in the building of the Culture Ministry in Takht-e-Zomorod area of Tehran in 1919. With the increase in the number of schools in Iran and the increasing need for trained teachers, Darol-Mo'allemin-A'li Markazi was developed into Darol-Mo'allemin-A'li (Higher House of Teachers) at the Higher Council for Sciences in October 1926.

In December 1927, the Iranian Parliament passed a law to modify the statute of the latter institution to support it further and help employ its graduates nationwide.

From then onward, Darol-Mo'allemin A'li was divided into the two major 'Scientific' and 'Literary' departments. In 1932 and with expansion of the courses offered, Darol-Mo'allemin A'li moved to Negarestan building, which had, as part of the Negarestan Garden, started its history as the summer residence of Fath-Ali Shah Qajar, the second king of the Qajar dynasty in 1808.

Darol-Mo'allemin A'li changed its name to Danesh-Saraye-A'li (Higher Training College) in 1933. In 1963, the government's board of ministers supplanted the Danesh-Saraye-A'li with the organization for Teacher Education and Educational Research. The organization was rebadged again as Danesh-Saraye-A'li and sponsored by the Ministry of Higher Education, which was founded in the country in 1967.

In 1974, with the approval of the Council for the Expansion of Higher Education at the Ministry of Higher Education, Danesh-Saraye-A'li turned into Teacher Training University with its own dedicated Board of Trustees. The university was subsequently assigned with the task of developing teacher education programs across the country and Danesh-Saraye-A'li or Higher Training Colleges were duly established in Zahedan, Sanandaj and Yazd and the Science Schools in Arak and Kashan were affiliated with Teacher Training University. The two final branches of the university were finally established in Sabzevar and Tabriz in 1987 and 1989 respectively.

In 1990, all the higher education institutions affiliated with or established by "Teacher Training University" were separated from the university and granted independence by the Council for the Expansion of Higher Education at the Ministry of Higher Education.

The university declared by the new name "Kharazmi University" in January 2012, for further expand and strengthen the educational and research activities. According to the decision made on 15.03.2015 at the Council for the Expansion of Higher Education at the Ministry of Science, Research and Technology, University of Economic Sciences (UES) was merged with Kharazmi University.

At present, Kharazmi University has 5 Vice Chancellors, 15 Faculties, 16 Research Institutes and Research Centers, 2 National Centers of Research Excellence, 2 Independent Incubators, 507 Faculty Members, comprised of 48 Professors, 166 Associate Professors, 277 Assistant Professors and 16 Lecturers.
